Relationships with family don't end when prison begins, but they do become harder. Families in Crisis teaches offenders how to connect with loved ones, strengthening and healing relationships. Families in Crisis supports families whose lives and relationships have been disrupted when a family member enters the criminal justice system; strengthens communities by helping offenders rebuild their lives and reenter society; and promotes systemic change by educating the public and policymakers about the impact of incarceration on families and the connection between preserving family ties and reducing recidivism. They provide extensive range of counseling and support services to prisoners, ex-offenders, and families including childcare, visitation, transportation, parenting support groups, HIV/AIDS education and support; provides resources as well.

The Resettlement Program provides long-term, reentry case management for women, and more recently, basic needs support and short-term case management for men, who are returning to the community after a period of incarceration. Resettlement acts as a bridge connecting individuals to collaborative partners in the community that are instrumental in securing appropriate housing, treatment, employment, education, food, clothing and other life necessities. The program's success is due to the commitment and determination of our participants, the positive bond between participants and staff, access to emergency funds and positive partnerships in the community.
