

Citizenship - Legal Assistance

IP represents people confined in Washington's jails, prisons, juvenile detention facilities, mental health facilities, and facilities for people with developmental disabilities. This work has focused on conditions of our clients' confinement, discrimination, sentencing and placement, alternatives to institutionalization, and access to courts, as well as issues related to rehabilitation, re-entry, and reductions in recidivism. We represent these clients to gain humane treatment and the protections our Constitution and laws require for them, and to assist them in creating strong, safe communities.

In today's economy, green-collar workers—people with expertise in ecology, energy efficiency and Earth-friendly development—are in increasingly high demand for their skills. This includes vocational and trade-level workers: carpenters who construct green buildings, weatherization specialists, installers of solar panels and wind turbines, ecological research assistants, organic farmers, beekeepers, and others.

Washington's College in Prisons Program

Most of the men and women entering correctional facilities lack the literacy and employment skills needed to succeed in our communities upon release. Washington state's community and technical colleges teach people in prison so they reenter society ready to contribute. * Washington is nationally recognized I-BEST (Integrated Basic Education and Skills Training) program pairs basic education with hands-on job experience so students learn in real-world settings.
